PERSONAL INTENTION

To find suitable employment after a difficult career transition, overcome hesitation about applying, and recognize openings that offer both stability and meaningful work.

About Your Working

Morgan, this Road Opening working has been designed around your transition into a new field, rather than a general wish for luck. The key represents access to opportunities that may initially seem closed; the salt marks the confusion and discouragement you are ready to release. The candle becomes a focus for clarity and deliberate movement.

Your Personalized Petition

“My path toward fulfilling, stable employment opens. I recognize fitting opportunities, present my experience with confidence, and take the next useful step.”

I write the spell. You work the magic.

The Open Road

A practical spell for clearing the way toward a specific opportunity

THE INTENTION

This working is designed for a time when you know where you want to go, but progress feels delayed, tangled, or repeatedly interrupted. It does not demand a particular outcome from another person. Instead, it focuses your will upon removing unnecessary obstacles, recognizing opportunities, and taking the next available step.

Before beginning, complete this sentence in your own words: "I seek a clear and workable path toward ____." Be specific enough to recognize movement, but leave room for an opportunity to arrive differently than you imagined.

GATHER YOUR MATERIALS

- ☐ One small white or yellow candle in a stable, fire-safe holder
- ☐ A sheet of plain paper and a pen
- ☐ A pinch of table salt
- ☐ A key you already own
- ☐ A small dish or saucer
- ☐ A glass of drinking water

Nothing on this list needs to be purchased especially for the spell. The key represents access and possibility; the salt marks a deliberate clearing; the candle gives your intention a visible point of focus. The water is for you to drink at the conclusion, bringing the commitment back into your everyday life.

PREPARE THE SPACE

Set the candle on a clear, heat-resistant surface away from fabric, pets, and drafts. Place the key and dish beside it. Take a moment to put away distractions. You do not need a formal altar or elaborate ceremonial tools; you do need enough quiet to give the work your full attention.

Opening the Way

1. NAME THE ROAD.

Write your intention on the paper as a positive, achievable direction: "My path toward meaningful employment opens through suitable opportunities and timely action." Fold the paper once toward you and place it beneath the dish.

2. CLEAR WHAT CAN BE CLEARED.

Place a small pinch of salt in the dish. Touch the key to the edge of the dish and say aloud what you are ready to release: confusion, delay, hesitation, a particular practical obstacle. Avoid naming another person as something to be forced aside. This is your road.

3. LIGHT THE WAY.

Light the candle safely. Hold the key in your hand and imagine a road becoming visible one section at a time. You do not need to see the entire journey. Concentrate on the next opening you can actually use.

"What is closed without cause, let it open.

What is tangled, let it loosen.

Where there is a way forward, let me see it.

Where action is mine to take, let me take it.

I walk the road that opens before me."

4. MAKE THE MAGIC PRACTICAL.

Sit with the candle for several minutes. Before extinguishing it, write one specific action you will take within the next two days: submit an application, make a call, ask a question, complete paperwork, or revisit an overlooked possibility. Magic can focus your will; it does not replace your participation.

5. CLOSE AND CARRY FORWARD.

Extinguish the candle with care. Drink the water. Keep the key with you until you have taken your chosen action. Recycle or retain the paper as you prefer; the salt can go into household trash. You may relight the candle for a few minutes on subsequent days if useful, always attending it while it burns.

A NOTE FROM KATRINA

An opening may begin with a conversation, an overlooked possibility, or a new route. Notice what becomes possible, and meet it with action.
